Study of city's public transportation suggests new shuttle service

by Lindy Magner

Among the preliminary recommendations of a $30,000 county-funded study on how transportation services may be changed to best serve the city, is a new bus shuttle route designed to serve a majority of current Dial-A-Ride users.

Since mid-September, consultant James Andrew Jr. has been analyzing existing bus routes and Dial-A-Ride services to determine if changes are needed to best serve residents who use public transportation.

According to City Manager Jack Shelver, the city requested the study, since no comprehensive analysis of the public transportation needs of residents had been conducted for almost 14 years.

"We felt it was a good idea to do an evaluation, and we were concerned about the cost of services," he said, noting that this fiscal year the city was forced to utilized its reserve of state Transportation Development Assistance (TDA) monies to fund a more costly county-managed Dial-A-Ride system.

Andrew stated his preliminary proposal of public transportation modifications would save the city at least $60,000 annually.

He is suggesting a shuttle bus which would travel a circular route, mostly within the city but also reaching MarketPlace at the Grove. The bus would either run one-way every 30 minutes, or both ways every hour. The route was designed to take most of the customer load from the county-managed Dial-A-ride which serves the general public at a cost to the city of $165, 698.

"We plotted on a map where existing Dial-A-Ride users are, and determined that 55 percent of the users would be within a two-block walking distance of the proposed shuttle service. This would well serve those users."

He said that replacing some Dial-A-Ride services with bus shuttles is not something new for the county, noting that a study of El Cajon's transit needs recommended such a change.

Other recommendations for Lemon Grove include dropping the Massachusetts to MarketPlace at the Grove portion of the MTDB-operated #16 bus route which originates in San Diego, making its last stop the Massachusetts trolley station.

Andrew is not recommending changes for county-operated bus route #856 and MTDB-operated bus route #36, nor for the Red Cross-operated Wheels program serving the elderly and disabled.

"The city receives $419,000 annually to fund transit services which are now costing $540,000. I'm trying to develop a transportation system which will work within their limits," he said.

Tuesday, the county Transit System hosted a workshop at the Lemon Grove Fire Station to solicit public input on which transportation services are used or desired in the city.

That input will be compiled and presented in several weeks to a nine-member advisory committee consisting of city officials, residents and two county staff members, Andrew said.

The committee will then decide on the final recommendations which will be presented to the Planning Commission on Dec. 27 and to the City Council for consideration Jan. 18.

Shelver said any approved recommendations would be implemented when the city considers it transporation contracts next July.

Giving thanks on Thanksgiving Day

The Lemon Grove Senior Center was humming with activity on Thanksgiving. Serving as the regional coordinator for Meals on the Move, volunteers distributed nearly 300 meals to home-bound seniors. Those seniors who could make it to the center were fed and entertained, and romanced by local politicos, such as Assemblyman Tom Connolly, shown above.

The Home Depot opens

As about 100 people gathered around the front entrance of The Home Depot on Broadway, city officials cut the ribbon Wednesday afternoon on the new store which is expected to generate more than $400,000 in sales tax and nearly $100,000 in property taxes for the city in its first year.

Under construction since late May, the store will now serve as The Home Depot's regional headquarters, replacing the San Diego store on University Avenue which closed as the ribbon was cut at the Lemon Grove store.

"The University store was the last small store in our chain of 280 locations," said Lemon Grove store manager Greg Hackett.

The new store will employ 150 workers, most who are being transferred from the closed University store, and features a large garden center and greenhouse.

The store was constructed on a 10.4-acre parcel which the city's redevelopment agency assembled through acquiring the land in the

Helix High restructuring gets a boost

by Lindy Magner

Helix High School's efforts to follow a statewide drive toward restructuring the learning environment were just made easier.

Recently, the school was among 100 high schools selected by the California Department of Education to participate in a network which will facilitate the sharing of ideas on restructuring.

According to Mary-Catherine Swanson of the County Office of Education, Helix is the only school in the Grossmont Union High School District to be selected as one of 10 county schools in the network.

She said that each selected school will receive a $4,000 grant, mainly to send staff to a summer academy for training in restructuring concepts.

Swanson explained that the network will link schools which seem to share ways in which they are restructuring.

Helix Principal Doug Smith said that being selected as a network school will make it easier for his school to win approval for waivers of state education codes which are often necessary when a school is attempting a restructuring effort.

"This should assure us speedy approval of state waivers. We're continually running up against, 'you can't do that' when we try to restructure," Smith said.

He noted that for several years Helix has been exploring ways to better meet the needs of students, in keeping with the recommendations of a state task force as published in, "California High Schools - Second to None," which outlines a vision for which schools should strive.

In 1991, the school received a planning grant which funded an exploration of ways to restructure the school. Though Helix was not one of the schools selected to receive a grant to implement those plans, Smith said the school has been attempting to imple-

Helix Happenings

by Sara Bone, Highland Fling Co-Editor-In-Chief

The C.I.F. game between Helix and El Camino proved to be very interesting. The first two points of the game were scored by El Camino, as their defense tackled Q.B. Josh Smith, for a safety. And that is how the score stood at half-time 2-0.

However, during the next two quarters El Camino exploded for 20 points. The Highlanders fought back, but it was not enough El Camino won 22-12.

C.I.F. play-offs continue this month on Dec. 3 and 4, as well as finals on Dec. 11. The final teams are Morse, Escondido, San Pasqual, El Camino, Sweetwater, Mt. Empire, Christian and Mt. Carmel.

As you know, wrestling season is already underway. The team will wrestle at home against West Hills on Dec. 9, with J.V. wrestling at 5:30 and Varsity to follow 20 minutes later.

The Helix Choral department presents its winter concert on Dec. 15. Guys and Dolls, Ladies First, and the Concert Choir will be performing, with shows at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

On Dec. 16 the Highlander wrestling team takes on El Cajon at El Cajon, J.V. at 5:30 and Varsity to follow afterwards.

Headstart expanding in Lemon Grove, Casa de Oro

by Lindy Magner

Headstart, a federally funded program for preschool-age children of low-income families, will soon expand its Lemon Grove and Spring Valley programs, whether or not it finds facilities to house the additional students.

According to Geneva Roberts, director of the East County Headstart programs administered by the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, funding for creating a 64-student site in Casa de Oro and adding 64 students to the 40 now served in Lemon Grove has already been secured, and classes will begin Jan 4. The only problem is that a nine-month search for sites to house the new program as well as the expansion has yet to pay off.

"Even though we don't have buildings yet, we will have the additional staff on board and we will be expected to start serving those students," said Roberts. "It becomes our job to be creative."

She said that expansion in these areas is needed based on census information and requests for services by parents.

Roberts explained that Headstart programs "without walls" are often operated in parks, and in some cases, if vacant property is available for lease, the program can utilize modular buildings. In fact, the La Mesa program operated in parks before it secured space in a shopping center, she said.

One alternative for Lemon Grove may be to utilize the same Broadway site now serving 40 students said Roberts, simply by changing the schedule of the current program. Likewise, the Casa de Oro students may have to be fit around the current program at the Grand Avenue site in south Spring Valley.

According to Dianna Moen, program specialist for Neighborhood House, the organization which oversees of all county Headstart programs, having staff visit homes is another option.

"When we don't yet have a licensed facility, we use the home-based option in which staff visits the homes and work with the parents who in turn work with their own children," she said.

Moen explained that Headstart is always looking toward reaching more and more preschoolers, with the Alpha Kappa Alpha program now serving just over 1,000 students in East County.

Lions Club now history

The Lemon Grove Lions will roar no more.

As of last June, the dwindling group of Lions Club members decided it was time to disband the club which was chartered in 1948.

According to former club secretary, Phil Plouse, the seven members were no longer to handle all the work needed to keep the club viable.

And, the club's attempts to solicit new members were dismal disappointments.

"We did everything we could to try to bring in new members.We hosted a free spaghetti dinner, and not one person showed up, even though we had gone in person to businesses, inviting people to the dinner," Plouse said, adding that he and five of the members have since joined other Lions clubs.

The main community service performed by the local Lions was funding vision screenings for elementary children in the Lemon Grove School District, a service they provided for 20 years.

Plouse said that in the last years, it became more and more difficult for the club to raise the $1,400 necessary to fund the screenings for needy students.

With the annual 12-week vision screenings scheduled to start soon, the group of optometrists who usually perform that service are now soliciting donations so that even without the Lions, the service can be provided to the school district, according to Barbara Schoer ? of VisonCare.

"We've been trying to raise the funds everywhere, pleading with all the local service clubs," she said, noting that donations of $50 to $100 have been coming in, but no large donor has yet materialized.

According to Ron Skillman of the Lemon Grove Exchange Club, hat club will consider at its December monthly meeting whether it can cover the cost of the entire vision program they way the Lions once did, or what a feasible contribution would be.

Citizen's patrol

This is a progress report of the Lemon Grove Citizens Patrol.

Under the very able guidance of Deputy Lenice Lopez, the applicants have been screened, and the training has begun. The first item of the curriculum is a "ride-a-long" with a patrol unit.

It was my pleasure to ride with Deputy Jerry Hartman on his eight-hour shift in which we cruised around the city. I found him to be very professional and efficient in the way that he handled the assignments given him. The radio jargon is somewhat confusing to an outsider, but a marvel in efficiency and brevity where time and understanding are critical to doing one's job.

I particularly liked the way Jerry seemed to be welcomed into every neighborhood and by the people on the street. We were given waves by adults and children alike, and I am sure that they were in appreciation and friendship for the deputy being there. It seems to me it is a very good thing to be more like the old "beat cop" even though we were in a prowl car.

A friendliness and confidence in our police officers is certainly more conducive to cooperation and a better crime-suppressive relationship with the public. The calls that we made were mostly routine, and not of serious nature, and that's the way we like it.

The training will next be classroom stuff consisting of courtroom procedure, information gathering, and vacation checks. These subjects will be followed by defensive driving, human relations, and fire-extinguisher training.

The second full day will be made up with CPR training for the first half, and back to the classroom for graffiti crimes in progress, and radio procedures. We expect that it will be a 10-2 and a 10-4 for all (that's "receiving well" and "acknowledgement.)"

The third day will consist of Crime Prevention instruction, an introduction to the YANA (You Are Not Alone) program. Also there will be protocol in writing reports, First Aid, and the rules, regulations and conduct that are germain to the job of all law enforcement. Another morning will be given over to the forms and methods of issuing handicapped parking violations, mark vehicles/cone and flare patterns, and traffic direction.

In addition there will be another ride-along with a driving test and a role play practical examination where all of the instruction is put into practice for evaluation. There will be accommodations for making up portions of the program for those who may have to miss segments of the curriculum.

And, then in January there will be a graduation ceremony at Lemon Grove Middle School. By then, uniforms will have been procured and fitted. It is expected that the first regular patrol will roll out on the streets of Lemon Grove in February. With many thanks to Deputy Lenice Lopez, Lt. Dave Herbert, Capt. Bill Flores, and all of the Jerry Hartmans in the department, we know it will be a huge success.

Since this is kind of my baby, I am extremely proud of all who have turned out to volunteer, and of the City Council for backing it so enthusiastically. We certainly will not go down in history as something comparable to the Texas Rangers, and we do not want to because we are not that kind of an organization. But we could be real "Lemon Aiders." It's possible?

VFW raising funds for annual banquet

VFW Post 2082 is making plans for the fifth annual banquet to honor outstanding public employees in the city. Each year an outstanding firefighter, deputy, teacher and city employee is honored by their organization and by the post.

This year the affair will be held at the post on Saturday, Jan. 29. Former state Senator Wadie Deddeh is slated as the guest speaker. There will again be a prime rib dinner and dancing downstairs after the banquet - all for $9.

To help offset part of the cost of putting on the dinner, the post is offering chances for a 7-day stay at the Sands Hotel in Indian Wells at $4 each, or 3 for $10. Those interested, should contact Bill Danielson at 466-1737 or Shay Hertach at 262-3668.

Seeking the spirit

by Paul Treske

T'was the day after the day after Thanksgiving. And since my newspapers and TV were trumpeting the official start of the yuletide and one of my neighbors had already strung his lights, I decided to venture out to seek the spirit of Christmas 1993.

Feeling the mall to be the proper place, I drove to Grossmont Center in search of that elusive spark that means the season has arrived.

The day was against it to begin with. It was warm, cloudy and bland, and there was nothing of the sparkle in the air that comes even with our Southern California Christmas. Arriving at the north end of the mall, I parked near the closed Bullocks building - a melancholy start to my quest.

Once in the mall, I was struck by the lack of shoppers there. The parking lot had seemed reasonably full, but there was no sense of bustle around me. Ahead of me was the rear of an impromptu stage and I could see children watching a show. "Aha," I thought, "happy kids and the feeling of wonder that only children can have." But just as I approached, the show ended and the children dispersed leaving that feeling of unfulfillment a little deeper.

As I walked south, there was a carousel - but only a handful of youngsters were riding it, and none of them seemed terribly excited or happy. Continuing on my way, it looked just like any other Saturday at the mall. Holiday decorations were up but there was no Santa in evidence, no carols over the loudspeaker and almost everyone wore either "poker faces," or seemed strained by the act of shopping. The longest line I found anywhere was in front of the ATM machine in the center of the mall.

Maybe they're at the food court, I thought - after all, it's still lunchtime. But they weren't there either. It was absolutely business as usual in the court, except for an outdoor stand in front of the coffee store next door, which dispensed hot chocolate and cider, but had few customers.

Beginning to feel like the grinch, I retraced my steps, after a visit to the toy store went unrewarded. The carousel! Surely this is one place where I can still find children with sparkling eyes, basking in the warmth of their adoring parents. More children were riding now, and as they spun round on the handsomely carved horses many waived gaily at the smiling parents. But as they left the rides, most lost their smiles and replaced them with the crankiness of children forced to accompany parents on a trip without sufficient reward.

A pretty child threw a coin into one of the pools and spoke for a moment with her mother about wishes. But then a pre-teen boy behind me asked someone, "What am I here for?" and I knew the answer: It just isn't time yet.

The hawkers and sellers can announce the coming of Christmas as early, as often and as loudly as they want, but its spirit will not come until people are ready to receive it. When that time comes and I walk the mall again, I will not have to seek the spirit of the holiday. Instead, it will open its arms to me.

From Where I Sit

Quitting cold turkey

by Frank Andrews

"Should we have a traditional or contemporary turkey dinner this year?" was my question for my wife to ponder.

"What's the difference?" she asked.

You can have the old traditional dinner with all the trimmings or pop a TV turkey dinner into the microwave for only a few minutes.

"Our kids are coming down for only a couple days, so I'm going all out and have turkey dinner that they will remember all year," she declared in her own inevitable way.

They exchanged notes by mail: our son's wish list was of his favorite sweets and mom's list of things to be fixed around the house. She then went shopping and ended up with all the trimmings including a beautiful, 16-pound bird. The "Bake Off" at our house started before daybreak and went far into the night. We decided to have our Thanksgiving dinner on the Saturday before the calendar day because the kids came down early to avoid the mad rush at the airport.

After giving thanks to our Lord, we proceeded to dig in. Everything was delicious, so our son, Dan, and daughter-in-law, Emma, left the table with a "Traditional Thanksgiving Dinner" under their belts. It was a shame that more of the tribe weren't with us, but you know how the old saying goes, "The kids have lives of their own in their own distant lands."

After sending the neighbors a plate of turkey and dressing, we even sent some home with the kids on the plane. We still have tons of the stuff left and now must figure ways to use it up. Turkey sandwiches aren't bad for a couple meals, but I'm not too crazy about turkey soup, turkey a la king, turkey hash, turkey omelet and several other ways to fix the leftovers.

It won't be hard for me to "Quit Cold Turkey" as I don't really care much for leftovers in any shape or form. Maybe next year we can send each of our seven kids a "contemporary Thanksgiving dinner" with all the trimmings by parcel post.

Holiday History

Germans bring Christmas tree to America

No one really knows who put up the first Christmas tree.

The earliest historical reference comes from the old Baltic port of Riga, where in 1510, local merchants celebrated Christmas Eve with a festive dinner and dancing in the marketplace around an evergreen tree decorated with artificial roses.

Germany, however, has long been associated with the tradition of Christmas trees and they were even sold in some cities as early as 1631 to be taken into homes to help celebrate the holiday.

Despite the lack of written evidence, it is known from the study of primitive cultures that evergreen trees have long suggested special powers. Prehistoric humans would regularly take in green boughs or full evergreen trees at the winter solstice to insure the return of springtime.

The Maypole is known to have begun as an evergreen tree and originally bore many of the same decorations used on early Christmas trees.

During the Middle Ages, an evergreen hung with apples stood for the tree of Paradise in miracle plays presented on Adam and Eve's Day, Dec. 24.

An unnamed visitor to Strasbourg wrote of fir trees hung with multicolored paper rose, apples and candy as early as 1605, surely one of the first references to Christmas traditions still in vogue today.

Also known as "sugartrees," Christmas trees throughout 18th-century Germany were primarily decorated with small candles and edible ornaments such as candies and cookies.

Prince Albert, the German-born husband of England's Queen Victoria, is credited with popularizing the tradition in his adopted homeland by decorating a tree for Windsor Castle soon after the birth of their first son in 1841. Each Christmas thereafter, he would decorate trees with candles and expensive sweets and present them to schools and army barracks.

The 18th century saw the introduction of commercially-produced ornaments of soft tin, molded wax, fancy paper and cardboard, as well as hand-blown, silvered Lauscha glass, glass beads and tinsel.

The first Christmas trees we know of in American were those decorated for children in the German Moravian settlement at Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, on Christmas Day in 1747. Hessian troops surprised by General Washington during the Christmas of 1776 were said to have been celebrating around a candle-lit Christmas tree.

By 1850, a decorated Christmas tree graced the pages of Godey's Lady Book, one of the first American women's magazines, as well as other publications of the era.

By 1900, one in five American families decorated trees during Christmas, and by 1930, the tree had become a nearly universal part of the American Christmas.

Franklin Pierce was the first president to have a tree at the presidential mansion in 1856 and it became an established tradition by the 1880s.

Theodore Roosevelt, an ardent conservationist, banished Christmas trees from the White House in an effort to stop the depletion of our national forests. His two young sons snuck one into the White House and were sent posthaste to Gifford Pinchot, the foremost conservationist in the country, for a lecture on conservation. Pinchot defended the cutting of Christmas trees, saying, when properly handled, tree-cutting is an asset in thinning the timberlands.

In 1923, President Calvin Coolidge began the National Christmas tree-lighting ceremony on the White House lawn, an annual holiday observance ever since.

It was during this time that the cultivation of Christmas trees began. For the first 2,000 years of recorded history, most Christmas trees had grown wild in forests. Theodore's famous cousin, Franklin, helped popularize the cultivation of trees.

President Franklin Roosevelt, surely one of the country's best-known tree farmers, grew Christmas trees on his estate at Hyde Park, N.Y., throughout the 1930s.

A Christmas tree decorated by members of the La Mesa/El Cajon branch of the American Association of University Women is on display at La Mesa Furniture until its auction Dec. 10. Proceeds will assist women in education.

Perot group won't forget NAFTA vote

by Steven Saint

The U.S. Congress passed the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) last month despite warnings from Ross Perot and United We Stand America that NAFTA supporters would be prime targets for defeat in next year's elections.

Local members of United We Stand America (UWSA), the grassroots organization piloted by independent presidential candidate Perot, have only two targets among the five members of congress representing San Diego.

East County Congressman Duncan Hunter voted against NAFTA, as did representatives Lynn Schenk and Bob Filner. Congressmen Randy Cunningham and Ron Packard voted in favor.

"We'll be crossing congressional lines," said Nabby Ramirez of UWSA, 52nd Congressional District. "The people are angry enough and we'll be in Cunningham's district come election time."

In the meantime, UWSA members will be collecting signatures for Perot's "Can't Vote, Can't Contribute" initiative. The measure would prohibit a state Senate or Assembly candidate from receiving campaign contributions from anyone but constituents.

UWSA members will discuss their signature-gathering campaign at their regular monthly meeting, 7 p.m. Wednesday at Wells Park Center, 1153 E. Madison Ave. in El Cajon.

UWSA will also meet with Congressman Filner at 8 p.m. Dec. 15 at the group's new office at The Grove, suite 255 just inside the north entrance of the mall.

For further information, call Ramirez at 491-9605.

Jews kindle lights for religious freedom

by Steven Saint

Wednesday night, Jews from all backgrounds and levels of observance will begin kindling the Hanukkah lights. While there may be the giving of presents during the eight days of Hanukkah and there will certainly be candles, the Jewish "Festival of Lights" has nothing whatsoever to do with the gift-exchange frenzy associated with Christmas.

"Hanukkah has become larger in the United States than it should be because of its proximity to Christmas," says Rabbi Leonard Rosenthal of the conservative Tifereth Israel Synagogue. "But it's message is still an important one: the ideals of religious freedom."

Hanukkah may have early roots in a Babylonian-style solstice celebration, but it's modern practice dates back to 165 B.C., when the legendary Maccabee family led the Jewish people in a miraculous ouster of their Syrian conquerors.

The Maccabean revolt was not only a bid for political autonomy, it was truly a religious war. Syrian Emperor Antiochus had banned the practice of Judaism, including the observance of the Sabbath, holy days and circumcision.

The story goes that when the Jews went to rededicate the temple, which the Hellenistic Syrians and their Jewish collaborators had converted into a shrine for Jupiter, they could only find one day's worth of oil untouched by pagan hands. The oil lasted for eight days, the time needed for Jews to prepare more oil.

To this day, Jews have kindled eight Hanukkah candles, beginning with one the first night and adding one every night for eight nights. Eight candles are mounted in a "menorah," with a ninth candle used to light the others.

Rosenthal says Jewish families should place lighted menorahs in windows facing onto the street to demonstrate their devotion and pride.

"This was not allowed in many countries because of persecution," Rosenthal says. "So it takes on greater significance in the United States, where we are free to practice Judaism."

Tifereth Israel will hold a Hanukkah party at 6:30 p.m. Dec. 11 at the synagogue, 6660 Cowles Mountain Blvd. The program will include candle lighting, refreshments and music by the youth chorale and the Electrocarpathians. Tickets are $3.50 and should be purchased in advance. For further information, call 697-6001.

ment some of those changes anyway.

For example, Helix just changed to a three-classes-a-day schedule which allows for class times of one hour, 45 minutes each, instead of the traditional 50 minutes. This "block" schedule has already been implemented at quite a few schools in the state, said Swanson.

"We thought that teachers and students needed longer blocks of time to spend on subjects," said Smith, explaining that more time should enable teachers to develop activities for students in addition to providing textbook learning.

He said the change will be "continually analyzed" as to its benefits.

Also in its pursuit of revamping the school structure, Helix is now developing a committee of teachers, parents, community members and students who will guide the school's restructuring efforts, Smith said.

And, by next fall, Smith hopes to begin a pilot program in which junior and senior students participate in career-oriented classes.

Eventually, he would like to see all upper-level students able to chose from five or six "career paths" of learning in which math, social sciences and other curriculum would be geared toward skills needed for a particular career.

Also, his staff is now working toward integrating curriculum, so that literature is utilized in the science classes and math applied to social studies.

As an experimental program, ninth-grade teachers who share the same students are now working together during preparation periods, to facilitate the cross-curriculum approach.

As to the network of schools, Smith feels he will know more about it following a January kick-off meeting at which representatives from the 100 chosen schools will meet for the first time.

the Broadway redevelopment area and relocating businesses and residents. The cost to the of property acquisition and relocation of 11 businesses and 87 residents was $11.8 million, with a total cost of construction reaching $17 million. To cover total costs, $6 million was provided by the city's redevelopment agency, and $11 million was provided by Home Depot, Inc.

At the ribbon-cutting ceremony, Mayor Brian Cochran lauded City Manager Jack Shevler and Assistant City Manager Doug Yount for their work on the project, as well as former Mayor Jim Dorman, under whose reign the project began.

The project has never been far from controversy, and though the dust has settled on the protests by some residents of a 36-unit trailer park which was demolished for the project, there are new concerns by some Lemon Grove residents about the new store becoming a magnet for day laborers seeking construction work.

At a recent City Council meeting, Councilman Jerry Legerton said that he had received an anonymous phone call warning that residents would picket the store if it allowed workers to congregate in its parking lot as they regularly did at the University Avenue store.

Last week, Yount met with representatives from the store and the Sheriff's Department to see what solutions could be worked out.

"We're now assessing all of our options and we plan to be as pro-active as possible," he said, noting that loitering regulations can be enforced if workers gather on the store's private property.

He said the Sheriff's Department indicated it would try to have deputies utilize the Home Depot parking lot for filling out their morning reports.

"Home Depot management said just the presence of the patrol cars seemed to discourage loitering at the University store," said Yount.

Community band to present holiday show in El Cajon theater

The La Mesa Community Band will present its Fifth Annual Holiday Concert Celebration at 7 p.m. Dec. 11 at Theatre East, 210 E. Main Street.

The band will perform many holiday favorites, including songs by Mel Torme and Irving Berlin as well as a jazzy selection composed by the band's own Abelardo Flores.

The trombone section will be featured playing some popular Christmas carols. The 100-voice San Diego Children's Choir will join the band this year, directed by Polly Campbell.

Santa will make a special appearance, bringing candy canes for all the children. There will also be a sing-along with the band.

Now in it's fifth year, the La Mesa Community Band is composed of 100 volunteer musicians from throughout San Diego County.

It is one of the largest community concert bands in the United States and has gained an international reputation under the direction of Charles D. Yates and Warren Torns.

Tickets can be purchased in advance from any member or at the door. Cost is $5 and children under 12 are free. For further information call 444-4118.
